It looks like most people leave Thurs morning and miss the final speaker. I'd like to see us put more on Monday evening and Tues evening with the final session Wed followed by the MAPT sponsored party. Maybe more would participate?? Also love opportunities for hands on experience with Versatrans or other student software for others. Loved the Alice training hoping for more next year. The group that came around that taught awareness and take charge before an intruder gets on the bus. Love hearing from other supervisors that have fresh ideas for training drivers annually. You all do a great job getting things going together. These were just some ideas. Thanks so much for all you do.	Private Link to Poll	July 21, 2017, 11:12 PM

It's just a month after attending MSBO conference. We are finishing up the school year and have end of year things to turn in for the finance department. We also have summer bus programs and routing for those are happening at that time. It's tough to say what will get people there. 2017 was the first year I attended the Annual Conference. Part of the reason I attended was because it was held in Lansing. Not having ever been to the ones held at Shanty Creek or like places up north, I was expecting it to be a professional conference. I found that it was very professional. There were a couple of exceptions, and not necessarily with MAPT. We attended a dinner hosted by Capital City Bus on one of the evenings. I was very disappointed with the way that Capital City engaged with us. It was disheartening to keep hearing, there's an open bar. I may be in the minority, but I'm not in to mixing drinking with my work, even off the clock. To me it set the tone of partying and letting everything kind of go. I know it was the end of the school year, and we all want to decompress, I just don't find boozing it up to be the way I choose to do that. What I was expecting was a nice dinner, a thank you from Capital City for our business and just a nice time out. I got the general idea that many others kind of endured the conference to make it to the night to party. Not my idea of professional or what I want to do.	Private Link to Poll	July 21, 2017, 08:24 AM

I prefer a fall conference, although I did attend (for the first time this year) since it was moved to the summer. The conference (as a whole) seemed (at times) to lack organization, professionalism, excitement, etc, compared to years ago. I don't know what the answer is and I don't want to be critical of those who worked so hard to put the conference on, but those are a few of my thoughts. I want to see MAPT thrive and be successful as I have gained much from the organization over the past several years! A few more things that come to mind would be: 1. Designate someone with experience/excitement as an Emcee for the entire conference. 2. Background music during the banquet dinner. 3. Always mention the district/company of the person when they are recognized from the stage. 4. I really enjoy having a paper copy of The Road Ahead mailed to me. I think people will take time to read it, if it contains information that is useful to them or their district, even if they are not involved much with MAPT. The monthly newsletter (The Road Ahead) is a useful tool that should be sent to every district superintendent/company in the state.	Permalink Multi-Page Survey	July 28, 2017, 10:16 AM

Strategies for dealing with difficult people. Parents, drivers and even fellow administrators. Transportation supervisors are often not as educated, but we are smarter!,as our fellow administrators. Having some "tools in our bag" to help navigate that gap would be quite useful. I'd like to be taken seriously and garner more respect but often feel dismissed because of my position. And parents; I'd like some sort of communications training to help deal with the parent screaming in my ear, telling me how inept and bullying my drivers are and how I'm just backing my driver and won't do anything about their treatment of the precious, never would do anything wrong darling (in reality, demon) child. Legislative updates & anticipated future legislation, regardless of the topic presented, would like more in-depth information. Content that goes beyond what I can gather myself with relative ease, something to make my time and cost worth it.	Permalink Multi-Page Survey	July 24, 2017, 07:49 AM
The topics offered are pretty good and the way its set up for options to take them twice so you dont miss out on a class is great too	Permalink Multi-Page Survey	July 24, 2017, 07:01 AM

Softer skill sets: dealing with difficult people (on either side of our levels of supervision), how to better manage crises (not as big as the ALICE Trng, but the kind that come up with our personnel from time to time), etc. We mostly know the technical transportation stuff; it's the other little things that our personnel bring up of a day that can weigh us down and detract from our mission if we don't respond to it in an appropriate manner. Strategies for dealing with difficult people. Parents, drivers and even fellow administrators. Transportation supervisors are often not as educated, but we are smarter!,as our fellow administrators. Having some "tools in our bag" to help navigate that gap would be quite useful. I'd like to be taken seriously and garner more respect but often feel dismissed because of my position. And parents; I'd like some sort of communications training to help deal with the parent screaming in my ear, telling me how inept and bullying my drivers are and how I'm just backing my driver and won't do anything about their treatment of the precious, never would do anything wrong darling (in reality, demon) child. It's like going to a buffet for lunch; I can eat a lot, or a little. Sometimes I need 'meat and potatoes' (technical information / training), and sometimes I need lighter 'vegetables' (softer skill-sets that help me deal with personnel challenges). And then there's the 'dessert' (key-note speakers that reassure us we're really not going crazy, we really are in this for the kids, and that transportation and education are really OK career fields to get into :-)	Permalink Multi-Page Survey	July 21, 2017, 10:30 AM
